Only First Mail Northbound on C. V. Road-Strike Ties Up Freight.

The eight men directly connected with the Central Vermont railroad locally were at their respective posts as usual Tuesday, but it is not known how long they will be there. Practically no trains were run over the road through this city Tuesday with the exception of the first mail train north bound from New London in the mornhound from New London in the morning. This makes the third strike that the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont have had to face and it is first one that the strikers have not made provision for the successful handling of the mails. It is believed that the government will send United States marshals out and wee that the mails. marshals out and see that the mails are run on time. The situation seems to be a pretty serious one and many neople locally are complaining because they do not receive shipments of freight. A number of the saloon keepers are running low on beer that is iled up at New London. One consignment of thirty kegs to one man is still on the dock at New London. Smaller shipments are also held pending some settlement or the court ing some settlement or the manning of trains to get the freight through.

They were handed to him by Post-master Charles A. Potter of Danielson, who was in charge of one of the advertising cars of the Forepaugh shows vertising cars of the Forepaugh shows for a dozen years, and who is known to circus men from Mexico City to Quebec. The passes that he handed up yesterday as a joke bore his own signature and the date 1894 and were like thousands of others that he passed out to lucky persons when he was "ten days ahead of the show." They were honored, too, and gladly though they were not taken up. They are good for every performance that the good for every performance that the show gives from now until the tents are folded for the last time. Postmaster Potter not only saw the show yesterday, but also many friends of other days. Many of the old timers have, of course, flitted to the four corners of the earth, but there were others who were still enamored of the city that moves every night. He had a fine time of it renewing old acquaint-ances and talking over old times. It was back in '71 that Postmaster Potter first answered to the lure of circus life, going with the advertising department of Stone & Murray's shows, then one of the best known in the country. Later he was for years with the Adam Forepaugh shows in a similar capacity, and later still in a similar capacity, and later still with Barnum & Bailey. His last tour with Barnum & Bailey. His last tour on the road before returning to Danielson was with the Wallace shows. All the time he was looking out for the publicity end of the business. For the nearly a quarter of century of seasons during which he prepared the people for the coming of the greatest shows on earth Mr. Potter traveled through every state and into every town of any size in the union. He was the advance agent of supreme He was the advance agent of supreme happiness for every child under the flag. Through all of the accessible territory of the Dominion of Canada territory of the Dominion of Canada and as far away as Australia, where he twice visited in his chosen line of work, he left a trail of multicolored circus prints telling in fascinating manner of the wonderful organizations of which he was the representative.

But like others in many walks of life the attraction of the occupation wated in time and today Mr. Potter contents himself with seeing the shows utents himself with seeing the show that come into this section of Nev England every summer. He probabl

MAJOR M'INTYRE'S EASY MONEY His Friend, W. G. Chase, Got Biggest Fish on Boston Trip and Divided Money With Him.

Major A. D. McIntyre picked up $13.70 in easy money on a trip that he made to Boston within a few days, and in connection therewith there is a fish story to be told.

In company with W. G. Chase of Boston, formerly of Putnam, and Mrs. Chase and Mrs. McIntyre, the major went out for a deep sea fishing trip on the King Philip. Of the way out the men members of the party made up a poel to be awarded to the man that could show the largest fish at the end of the day a catch. Mr. Chase inthat could show the largest fish at the elect of the day's catch. Mr. Chase in-cidentally remarked that if he won out he would divide up with his friend. A 3-pounder, hooked early in the day, looked as if it had earned the prize money for its captor, but while the boat was making the run into the dock Mr. Chase hooked a big rock cod, which he landed with Major Mc-Intyre's aid. When they put it on the scales it weighed in at ten pounds, and won the pool, amounting to $27.40. Half of the money came to Putnam, as

The Mayor in Jail. There is something the matter with the law governing the city of Lawrence if it can be possible for the affairs of the city to be administered from a fall cell, and it is to be hoped that the city will be spared the shame of such a permanent condition permanent condition.

Mayor White, a three years' prisoner for conspiring to bribe, insists that he is able to perform his duties and that his office cannot be declared vacant. Legal minds are wrestling with the problem of just how the phraseology of the charter should be interpreted. Ordinary prisoners in jail are not allowed to make their cells business offices, and in the eyes of the law Mayor White should have no more rights than any other man who is con-victed of crime and sentenced. I would seem that the solution of the whole problem might be very simple. Give the mayor the same amount of work as any other prisoner and no work as any other prisoner and no more privileges. Then he will be un-able to perform his duties as mayor, which call for all his time and many conferences with citizens, and Law-rence can fill his place and again hold up her head.—Boston Traveler.
